Essentially self-taught, Buenz's searing virtuosity is distinguished by a highly individualized approach. As active on the Brazilian music scene as he is in jazz, Buenz has performed with internationally-renowned Brazilian artists Flora Purim & Airto and Toninho Horta, and for eight years has played electric bass and guitar in the popular Brazilian dance band Viva Brazil. He has performed and/or recorded with Columbian singer/songwriter Claudia Gomez, jazz saxophonist Harvey Wainapel, and jazz vocalist Madeline Eastman, among many others.

SAM BEVAN

Since moving to San Francisco in 1999, Sam Bevan has established himself as one of the most versatile and creative bassists in the Bay Area music scene, joyously intermingling jazz, funk, r&b, folk, Afro-Cuban, Afro-Venezuelan and West African disciplines. The foundation was laid for Bevan's career when he began classical piano lessons at the age of four. Sam's adoption of the electric and acoustic bass followed periods playing jazz and classical piano, singing professionally (he still sings when he solos on bass) and getting a BA in French. After attending college in Salt Lake City, he now resides a few miles from where he was born in Oakland, California.
